

CLIENT CASE STUDY:
CANDO FM

Identifying energy saving potential in an existing building to reduce costs and carbon emissions

Jonny Williams and the team at CandoFM - a community radio station based in Barrow-in-Furness - are on a continuous quest for sustainability and efficiency.

Jonny contacted the W&F Green Enterprise Hub to get advice on lowering their energy bills and reducing their carbon footprint, through an Energy Advice Visit.

They were able to access expert advice to address the heating losses they faced in a complicated existing building. The survey helped Jonny and the team identify which changes would make the biggest impact, and gives them the data they need to apply for funding towards their implementation.

“With this valuable data, we are now in a very good position to apply for grants that can help us actualise these energy-saving changes,” said Jonny.

And that's not the end of the sustainability journey for CANDO FM who, in the spirit of innovation and environmental responsibility, have an ambitious goal of developing a fully green digital radio transmitter. This cutting-edge initiative is aimed at powering their broadcasts entirely with renewable energy, thereby setting a new standard for eco-friendly media production!

“We extend our sincere gratitude to the staff at W&F Green Enterprise Hub. Their professionalism and assistance have been paramount in charting a course for a greener, more cost-effective future for CANDO FM.” - Jonny Williams

Jonny says:

“The goal was straightforward yet ambitious: to identify opportunities where we could conserve energy and, consequently, reduce our carbon footprint.”
